This team will study Adélie penguin population dynamics at Cape Bird. Scientists will assess links between environmental variables and breeding success, and track changes in the diet and foraging patterns of penguins. The research will examine whether they are tied to a changing climate.